You may choose to include the following to your syllabi:

1. Saint Martin's University has required everyone to receive the Coronavirus vaccine – unless they have a medical or religious reason (through the Student Health Center or the Office of Human Resources.) If you have not received the vaccine, it is your responsibility to protect our community and yourself by following masking and social distance recommendations.
 - Face Covering: The university will follow Washington state policies regarding face mask exemptions and requirements: <https://coronavirus.wa.gov/information-for/you-and-your-family/face-masks-or-cloth-face-covering>
 - Social Distancing: is no longer part of Washington state policies unless exposed or demonstrating symptoms
2. Students and faculty perform self-check for COVID-19 symptoms before coming to class Students and faculty should perform a self-check each day before coming to campus, and stay away from campus if they are ill. Students who are ill should inform faculty. Faculty who are ill should arrange for a communication plan with students if they need to miss class. Faculty are encouraged to give a gentle reminder at the beginning of each face-to-face class that students experiencing symptoms listed on the checklist should elect to remove themselves from campus. Anyone diagnosed with COVID-19 or a variant, or living with/caring for someone diagnosed with COVID-19 or a variant, should notify the Office of Public Safety.
3. Support for students who are unable to attend classes for any reason due to illness (including COVID, travel restrictions, and quarantine): Faculty should attempt to make reasonable accommodations for students who are unable to attend classes or complete coursework due to any medical incident or illness. Students adversely impacted by illness should notify their faculty and academic advisor to arrange for accommodations as soon as they become aware that they will be needed. (Another alternative is to use the Saints Care form on the SMU website.) Although reasonable accommodations need to be made, faculty are not obligated to offer the missed classroom sessions via zoom to the student.
