Dear Families,

Welcome to Saint Martin’s University! The families of our students are important members of our educational community — a community founded on the 1,500-year-old Benedictine traditions of hospitality, respect, service and stewardship. Driven by these values, the faculty and staff of Saint Martin's are dedicated to the success of each student, both inside and outside the classroom.

You play an important role in your student’s transition to the “Saint Martin’s Experience.” The transition to a new campus environment may be a challenge for him or her. It may be challenging for you as well, as your child may no longer rely on the daily guidance you have been providing for so long. Our community will support your student to become a strong and independent individual, while ensuring that he or she continues on the path you have worked so hard to pave. In doing so, we pledge to you that we will be open and welcoming to your questions and need for information.

Members of the Office of Student Affairs have compiled this resource book to assist you in successfully transitioning your child into the next exciting step of his or her life. We hope it will serve as a useful directory of resources available here at Saint Martin's University. Should any questions arise as you are reading through the directory, feel free to contact our dean of students, Melanie Richardson, at 360-438-4367.

University life is a fun, challenging and exciting time for students and families alike. We hope you enjoy it!

Thank you again for entrusting your student to us. I look forward to partnering with you in this educational endeavor.

Sincerely,

Roy F. Heynderickx, PhD
President
Mission statement

Saint Martin’s University is a Catholic, Benedictine institution of higher education that empowers students to pursue a lifetime of learning and accomplishment in all arenas of human endeavor.

Saint Martin’s students learn to make a positive difference in their lives and in the lives of others through the interaction of faith, reason and service.

The University honors both the sacredness of the individual and the significance of community in the ongoing journey of becoming.

GUIDING PRINCIPLES

With the Catholic, Benedictine tradition as our guide, we accomplish our mission by recognizing the spiritual and ethical dimensions of all human activity and by celebrating the uniqueness and worth of each human being. Our goal is to provide a living and learning environment that prepares students for active, responsible and productive lives in their professions and as members of their local and global communities.

BENEDICTINE VALUES

- Awareness of God: To look for God not in the abstract but in the ordinary events of every day.

  “We believe that the divine presence is everywhere.” Rule of Benedict 19

- Community living: To become who we are by our relationships with others.

  “Let all things be common to all.” Rule of Benedict 33

- Dignity of work: To appreciate the dignity of work in God’s creation.

  “They live by the labor of their hands.” Rule of Benedict 48

- Hospitality: To offer warmth, acceptance and joy in welcoming others.

  “Let all...be received as Christ.” Rule of Benedict 53

- Justice: To work toward a just order in our immediate environment and in the larger society.

  “That in all things God may be glorified” Rule of Benedict 57

- Listening: To hear keenly and sensitively the voices of persons and all created beings.

• Moderation: To be content with living simply and finding balance in work, prayer and leisure.

  “All things are to be done with moderation.” Rule of Benedict 48

• Peace: To strive for peace on all levels: with self, others and God.

  Rule of Benedict Prologue

• Respect for persons: To respect each person regardless of class, background or professional skill.

  “No one is to pursue what is judged best for oneself, but instead, what is better for someone else.” Rule of Benedict 72

• Stability: To cultivate rootedness and a shared sense of mission.

  “To stand firm in one’s promises.” Rule of Benedict 58

• Stewardship: To appreciate and to care lovingly for all the goods of this place.

  “Regard all utensils as if they were the sacred vessels of the altar.” Rule of Benedict 31

Saint Martin’s University was established in 1895 by monks of the Roman Catholic Order of Saint Benedict. The Order, the oldest in Western civilization, was founded by Saint Benedict of Nursia in about 528. From that early period to the present, Benedictines have worked in education, their abbey schools nurturing and guarding the legacy of the classics of Western civilization. Monk scholars helped write the cultural and educational history of Europe and, in the past 150 years, that of the United States.

Benedictine history in the United States began in 1845 when Abbot Boniface Wimmer, O.S.B., established the first American abbey school, Saint Vincent College, near Latrobe, Pennsylvania. From there, Benedictines founded high schools, colleges and universities throughout the country. Saint Martin’s is one of 18 Benedictine colleges and universities in the United States and Canada, and the only one west of the Rockies.

The site of Saint Martin’s University and Abbey, on a wooded hillside in rural Lacey, Washington, was selected in 1893 by Abbot Bernard Locnikar, O.S.B., of Minnesota’s Saint John’s Abbey, Saint Martin’s motherhouse. Saint Martin’s first enrolled boys and young men between the ages of 10 and 20. The new school admitted its first student, Angus McDonald, on Sept. 11, 1895. Both boarders and “day scholars” were accepted and taught from a curriculum of preparatory and high school classes, plus classical and commercial college courses.

By 1897, 29 grammar and high school students were attending Saint Martin’s. College-level courses were added in 1900 to provide the necessary education for candidates planning to enter the Benedictine priesthood.

Saint Martin’s became a four-year, accredited, baccalaureate-granting institution in 1940. The University became coeducational in 1965. It changed its name from Saint Martin’s College to Saint Martin’s University in August 2005 to more accurately reflect the institution’s nature, better fulfill its mission, and recognize the wide variety of undergraduate and graduate programs available to students.

The years 2008 and 2009 brought many changes to the campus: the opening of the University’s fourth residence hall, Parsons Hall, named for long-time Saint Martin’s supporters Ken F. Sr. and Gale L. Parsons; the opening of Harned Hall, a state-of-the-art academic building, honoring H.C. “Joe” Harned; the dedication of a world-class track and field facility and the Jan Halliday ’89 Memorial Plaza; and the completion of Charneski Recreation and Fitness Center. At the beginning of 2009, the University welcomed its tenth president, Roy F. Heynderickx, Ph.D.

In 2011, the name of the street guiding guests through Saint Martin’s main entrance was changed from 6th Avenue to “Abbey Way” — part of the transformation of north campus that culminated in early 2013 with the courtyard renovation behind Old Main. Also in 2013, the new Fr. Richard Cebula, O.S.B. Hall, home of The Hal and Inge Marcus School of Engineering, opened and achieved Platinum LEED certification; it is currently the highest-rated LEED-certified building in the Western Hemisphere and third highest in the world.
Through decades of change and growth, the University has held true to its Benedictine values — community, hospitality, stewardship, listening and dignity of work, among others — which remain central to life at Saint Martin’s.

SAINT MARTIN OF TOURS
Saint Martin of Tours, patron saint of Saint Martin’s University, figures prominently in the development of Christianity in fourth-century Europe. During his lifetime, Martin established about 3,500 churches. Martin spent his youth as a cavalryman in the Roman army, but he longed for something more. He horrified his father, a tribune in the army, by studying to become a Christian. Legend has it that Martin, while still a soldier, chanced upon a shivering beggar clutching his rags about him in the bitter cold. Martin cut his flowing cavalry cloak in two and gave half to warm the beggar. Later, Martin had a vision in which the beggar revealed himself to be the Lord Jesus Christ. Soon after, Martin obtained a discharge from the army.

As a free man, Martin committed himself to Christianity in earnest, studying under famous scholars and teachers of the era. Soon, he was considered the holiest man in France. He chose to remain a missionary until 371, when the people of Tours, France, prevailed on him to become bishop. Saint Martin’s Abbey and University take their name from this illustrious patron.

ABBEY CHURCH
The Abbey Church, a beautiful modern structure adjacent to the monastery, is the liturgical center of the Saint Martin’s community. The church’s serene atmosphere, brilliant stained glass, banners, artwork and surrounding gardens draw many people from campus and the nearby community.

The church is used for daily Mass and monastic office, and occasionally for small concerts, lectures and convocations.

SAINT MARTIN’S ABBEY
Now in its second century of monastic life in western Washington, Saint Martin’s Abbey began its pastoral work in 1891 at Tacoma’s newly established Holy Rosary parish. At the behest of German-speaking Catholics, Saint John’s Abbey, Collegeville, Minnesota, sent Fr. William Eversmann, O.S.B., to be pastor of the new parish. Within a few years, the Benedictines of Minnesota sent enough monks to found a new monastery and school about 50 miles south of Seattle in what was to become Lacey, Washington.

Saint Martin’s University, founded in 1895, is the primary apostolate of the Abbey. The school went through a number of stages. Initially, there was an abbreviated grade school, a high school and a two-year college. In the early 1940s, the grade school was dropped and the college became a four-year institution. By the mid-1970s, the monks decided that their only educational apostolate would be the college.

At present there are 33 monks vowed to Saint Martin’s Abbey. The monks, both priests and brothers, still work in a variety of jobs in Saint Martin’s University — from teaching to serving in staff positions. Other areas of ministry include parish assignments and ministry as chaplains at hospitals in the Pacific Northwest. Nevertheless, the primary activity of the monk is always prayer, especially the communal prayer of the Divine Office. The monks meet three times daily for the Divine Office, and they celebrate the Eucharist together every day.

BON APPÉTIT

360-438-4563 • www.cafebonappetit.com/saintmartin

All food service at Saint Martin’s University is managed by Bon Appétit Management Company, an award-winning company known for its standards of excellence and innovation in sustainable food service. Bon Appétit brings made-from-scratch restaurant-style dining to Saint Martin’s University. Breaking bread together helps to create a sense of community and comfort.

The Bon Appétit staff recognizes the important role they fill and take great care to honor their position on the Saint Martin’s campus. Food is purchased with high ethical standards and environmental impact in mind; eggs are cage-free, beef is range-fed, fish adheres to Seafood Watch guidelines, and produce is organic and grown locally whenever possible. Bon Appétit encourages feedback and gladly works with individual students to meet special dietary needs.

CAMPUS MAIL

Old Main, Room 109

The Saint Martin’s mailroom receives and sends mail for the University community. The mailroom also sells stamps and provides mailboxes for students who sign up for one. Mail is usually available from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. If a student receives a special delivery letter or package, a note is left in his or her mailbox with instruction to retrieve it from the SMU mailroom staff. When sending mail to your student, please use the following address to insure speedy mail delivery:

When a group of abbots and presidents representing Catholic Benedictine universities were asked what the centers of their schools were, they agreed: campus ministry.

Saint Martin’s Campus Ministry has a rich tradition. For years it has served and supported the Catholic Benedictine identity on campus, connecting the monastic and school communities together through opportunities to grow in faith, reason and service.

Campus Ministry is not only for Catholics. Whoever they are, wherever they’re from, students will find Campus Ministry a welcoming and inviting place to meet new people and enter into the Saint Martin’s University community in the fullest and most meaningful way.
Saint Martin's University’s Office of Career Development is designed to assist students from their admission through graduation. Services are also available to alumni of Saint Martin’s. The office provides the following services, programs and information to support students and alumni:

- Online jobs database – Saints4Hire: The database contains employment opportunities with city, county, state, federal and private employers. Jobs, updated daily, include internships, part-time, full-time, summer, seasonal, temporary and permanent positions. Through this system, students and alumni are able to store resumes and access jobs, employer information, career center events and alumni mentors.

- Resumes, cover letters and interviewing skill-building sessions: These sessions are offered one-on-one or in groups throughout the year.

- Assessments: The Office of Career Development has a number of interest assessments available to assist students in selecting their majors and careers, including the Washington State WorkSource site and O*NET, which provide detailed information on occupations, wages, job outlooks, professional associations and links to job openings. TypeFocus, which contains four assessments and career matches, is administered to all incoming freshman students as part of their first-year seminar.

- Career fairs: Representatives from local, state, federal and private companies and agencies participate in career fairs and recruiting events throughout the year. The Office of Career Development holds events for each school/college with the University, and hosts the annual Career and Internship Fair in the spring.

- Class: BA 210 is a one-credit elective course in career management, offered each semester to all majors. Students develop networking skills, meet alumni and business professionals, and build their online social presence.

- Etiquette dinner: Hosted by the Office of Career Development each semester, this dinner — attended by several staff and faculty “table captains” — helps students develop the art of dining etiquette and conversation.

- Career resource library: Students may check out books on jobs, resumes, career decision-making, scholarships, cover letters, interviewing, various directories and similar subjects through the career resource library.

- Graduate school testing: The Office of Career Services offers information on the GRE, GMAT, LSAT/LSDAS and MCAT.
• On-campus interviewing and recruiting: This activity is scheduled to help meet the employment needs of students and employers. Announcements of interviewing and recruiting events are posted on bulletin boards, by email and through faculty.

• Saints Have a Plan: a campaign for undergraduate seniors to complete a qualifying plan of action for life after SMU. The campaign is an effort to engage students in their job search before graduation and to take advantage of the resources available. They receive a t-shirt and raffle tickets for prizes donated by the on- and off-campus communities.

• Virtual career center: Resources and a calendar of events for the Office of Career Development are available www.stmartin.edu/careercenter. We also invite students, parents, family members, alumni and employers to like “SMU Career Services” on Facebook, where we post news and events of interest.

Encourage your student to take advantage of their Office of Career Development resources!

The Counseling and Wellness Center is committed to helping students meet the challenges of life they may experience during college. Our professional team of licensed counselors and graduate trainees provide time-limited individual, couples and group counseling for students and referral services for those requiring specialized or longer treatment. These services are provided free of charge to students enrolled in classes at Saint Martin’s University.

Students can call, email or stop by the center and make an appointment during our hours of operation from 9 until 5, Monday through Friday. Over the holidays, semester breaks and the summer, the hours and scope of services are reduced and includes crisis intervention, consultation and trainings.

Students seek counseling for a wide variety of reasons, including depression and anxiety; life crises; identity issues; relationship concerns; difficulty with loss or other life transitions; sexual choices and concerns; problems related to alcohol or drug use, as well as many other issues of concern. We treat each student with sensitivity, providing affirmative counseling that values diversity and respects the individual.

All services are confidential: no information is released without the student’s consent, unless required by law. Additionally, the staff provides consultation, crisis intervention and educational workshops to the campus community.
Our Substance Abuse Prevention Program Coordinator provides prevention programs and individual or group support for students about alcohol and other drugs.

HEALTH INSURANCE
Old Main, Room 250
360-438-4389 • accounts@stmartin.edu www.stmartin.edu/sfs/billing/Insurance.aspx

Saint Martin's University requires that all students attending at least half-time have health insurance coverage. The University has a student plan available for those students who do not have personal coverage. All students are charged the University’s premium for insurance at the start of the fall semester. For students who have personal coverage and would like to waive the charge, waivers must be submitted and approved online only by the semester’s deadline in order to opt out of the school’s coverage. Online waiver information is provided in the student’s billing packet. Online waivers are due around the third week of the semester; the official due date is provided in students’ billing packets as well as in emails sent to the students’ SMU email several weeks prior to the deadline. After this deadline, waivers cannot be accepted and the student will be responsible for the charge — so, please, be prompt in submitting the waiver. Waivers approved for the fall semester are valid through the spring semester. However, if the student’s private insurance information changes, it is the student’s responsibility to notify the Student Financial Service Center staff of the change.

The waiver site will be available beginning July 10 for fall waiver submission. Students must be enrolled for fall classes and assessed the health insurance charge at least 5 days prior to attempting to submit their waiver. This is to allow for the student's information to be uploaded into the waiver portal.

Students who receive insurance coverage through the University must submit a claim form to their physician at the time of service. Claim forms are available online or at the Student Financial Services Center.

If your student is covered by your health insurance policy, please give him or her all information regarding the health insurance coverage, including instruction on how claims are to be filed and reimbursed. Encourage your student to always carry a current insurance or HMO card, and to identify local participating providers that will accept their health care insurance.

The Office of Intercultural Initiatives sponsors a variety of diversity and service programs that create a welcoming and respectful learning environment for the entire Saint Martin's community. Initiatives focus on three areas:

• Services that support underrepresented and underserved students
• Programs that foster critical multicultural awareness
• Service opportunities that engage participants in social justice education and action

These areas help Saint Martin's work toward a more engaging campus community that prepares students to be fully engaged participants within the our society.

The Learning Center offers free drop-in subject area tutoring in accounting, business, mathematics, computer science, biology, chemistry, physics, and world languages. Peer tutoring takes place in a collaborative learning environment. Tutors are trained to help students with difficult course content, to reinforce effective approaches to studying, and to strengthen self-directed learning behaviors.

Writing: Nathalie Kuroiwa-Lewis, Director
360-438-4533 • NKuroiwalewis@stmartin.edu
The Writing Center offers students a comfortable place to meet and discuss academic, personal, creative and professional writing with peer readers. In a relaxed atmosphere removed from the classroom setting, peer readers ask questions and make suggestions that help writers generate topics, develop a thesis, organize materials and clarify ideas. Students are encouraged to make an appointment in advance by contacting the Writing Center or visiting the front reception desk.

Advising: Diane Rodriguez, Director
360-438-8823 • DRodriguez@stmartin.edu
Pre-major and exploratory advising is provided to students who are in need of gathering information about different fields of study and careers. First and second year students are guided by an advisor in their choice of courses. Ongoing outreach services help to refer students to appropriate resources on campus as needed.

Designed by internationally acclaimed architect Michael Graves, O’Grady Library is now home not only to the library, but to the Center for Student Learning, Writing and Advising, the ITS Help Desk, and the faculty Center for Scholarship and Teaching. O’Grady Library supports student success by bringing together research assistance, tutoring and technology help in one location. Students also have access to a variety of learning spaces and resources: the Information Commons, the newly updated Multimedia Center, the Curriculum Resource Center, five group study rooms, three media rooms, two classrooms and the spacious Benedictine Reading Room. Books, journals, reference materials, videos and music are available both in the library and online, and students also can check out laptops, digital camcorders, digital voice recorders, and other multimedia equipment. The library extends its resources through participation in the Summit, the shared catalog of the Orbis Cascade Alliance, which makes available to Saint Martin’s students more than nine million titles from 37 academic libraries in the Pacific Northwest, with courier delivery to O’Grady Library.

The Office of Public Safety is responsible for campus safety and security 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Public Safety employs six full-time staff and approximately 20 student officers. The office has primary responsibility for enforcement of University rules, regulations and policy, as well as applicable local, state and federal laws. The Lacey Police have primary criminal jurisdiction on campus with fire and medical aid provided by Thurston County Fire Protection District 3. Public Safety has a close working relationship with local police and fire service. Public Safety officers patrol the campus 24 hours a day and, in addition to other duties, will offer upon request a safety escort to cars, residence halls and other buildings on campus. Students may request a safety escort at any time by calling the Office of Public Safety. For information about the Office of Public Safety services and annual campus crime statistics, visit www.stmartin.edu/security.

Saint Martin’s University has subscribed to e2Campus to send time-sensitive emergency communication to campus community members. Saint Martin’s will use the system only to provide official notification of critical emergencies (i.e., situations that pose an imminent, physical threat to the community) and weather-related campus closures. By opting in, students will receive emergency notification by SMS (text messaging) and/or e-mail via cell phone and smart phone. Students can check their account status here: www.stmartin.edu/alerts.

The Student Financial Service Center staff strives to provide efficient and welcoming service to all of the Saint Martin’s community, and empathetic and respectful counsel to our students and their families in regards to their financial education concerns, inquiries or limitations.

FINANCIAL AID
Applying for financial aid: Complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) online at www.fafsa.ed.gov. The school code for Saint Martin’s University is 003794. Students are encouraged to file their FAFSA applications by March 1. All types of aid are awarded on a first-come, first-served basis. Many funds are extremely limited.

Institutional gift aid: Institutional aid awarded upon admission into Saint Martin’s University will remain constant for the next four years. Students should be aware that the names of the grants/scholarships they receive may change from year to year; however, the total dollar amount will remain the same.

Conditions of SMU Institutional Scholarships/Grants:
1. Students receiving full tuition assistance will not be eligible for institutional scholarships/grants.
2. Award amounts will not be guaranteed for students who are not continuously enrolled.
3. Students must be enrolled at least half-time at the Lacey campus.
4. Institutional aid will be pro-rated to match the student’s enrollment.
5. Students receiving institutional aid should not already hold a
Verification: Each year, students who have filed the FAFSA may be selected by the federal government for verification. Selected students will be required to turn in additional documentation before their financial aid can be finalized. The Student Financial Service Center will notify students if they need to submit additional documentation.

Students are encouraged to utilize the IRS Data Retrieval Tool when completing their FAFSA application; this will expedite the verification process, should they be selected for verification.

Reducing/declining financial aid awards: If a student would like to reduce, decline or cancel any of the financial aid he or she receives, notification must be submitted to the Student Financial Services Center in writing.

PAYMENT/BILLING

Receiving your financial aid: All financial aid funds, including outside scholarships and private loans, are first applied to the student’s tuition and mandatory fees for the current term. Housing charges are deducted next.

When current term charges are paid in full, any financial aid amounts over these costs are then refunded to the student. Credit balances resulting from a Parent PLUS loans will be processed based on the parent’s authorization on the PLUS form.

Financial aid funds will not be disbursed to a student’s account until after the add/drop period has ended.

Book vouchers: If a student is expecting a refund from financial aid, he or she may be eligible to receive a book voucher. Book vouchers allow students to charge their books and supplies from the Saint Martin’s University Bookstore to their account and have the costs deducted from their aid. Book vouchers can be issued the week prior to the start of the semester. Check with Student Financial Services to see if the student is eligible.

When to consider an emergency short-term loan (E-Loan): An emergency short-term loan may be available to students who are expecting a financial aid refund and need funds to help assist with housing or book costs that are not charged to their SMU account. Short-term loans may be awarded up to $500, provided the student’s expected refund is at least that amount. Short-term loans are limited to one per semester. The Student Financial Service Center is unable to issue short-term loans prior to the first day of the semester. Please contact the Student Financial Service Center for more information.

Tuition due dates: Payment is due in full, or satisfactory payment arrangements must be completed by the week prior to the start of each semester for which the student is enrolled. All students must finalize their financial obligations with the Student Financial Services Center; this process is referred to as “validation.”
Payment options: For students’ convenience, a monthly payment plan is available. All payments/plans must be in place the week prior to the start of the semester.

Monthly payment plan: Students and families can set up a monthly payment plan for the semester or for the school year (fall and spring) through Tuition Management Systems. There is a $57 processing fee to enroll in the monthly payment plan. To sign up for a monthly plan with Tuition Management Systems, visit www.afford.com/stmartin.

Type of payments accepted: Saint Martin’s University accepts payment by cash, check, money order or traveler’s checks, submitted either in person or by mail to the Student Financial Service Center.

Credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, Discover and American Express credit card payments are accepted online only, through the student’s Self Service account. Please be aware that a service fee applies to payments made by credit card. Credit card payments cannot be accepted in person or by phone, email, mail or fax. Electronic check payment (e-check) is another online option; e-check payments are free.

OTHER SERVICES

• Check cashing: Students may cash checks up to $30.00 at the Student Financial Service Center.

• Student work-study checks: Student payday is the 10th of each month by direct deposit or a ‘pay card’ if no bank information is available. Direct Deposit is encouraged. Forms are available in the Student Financial Service Center or with the Finance Office for payroll.

• Refunds: Refunds are processed within 30 days of the date the credit balance is reflected. Refunds are processed weekly through our servicer. More information is to come regarding this.
The Student Health Center assists students with a wide range of health issues including upper-respiratory infections, injuries and other medical concerns. Students also may receive limited disease management for chronic health problems. After-hours hospital or emergency room care, medical specialists and dental care, eye exams, hearing tests and X-rays are referred locally.

All undergraduate students enrolled at Saint Martin's Lacey campus are assessed a health services fee each semester and may use the majority of services at the Student Health Center at no additional charge. Additional laboratory fees may apply. Graduate students may utilize the center for a fee of $20 at the time of the visit. Appointments may be scheduled in advance and are recommended; however, walk-in and same-day appointments are welcome.

Saint Martin's University follows the immunization guidelines from the Centers for Disease Control (www.cdc.gov), the American College Health Association (www.acha.org), and state and local public health departments. The immunization requirement, described below, applies only to those students born on or after January 1, 1957:

1. Verifiable proof of two doses of MMR or rubeola vaccine since 1969;

   OR

2. Diagnosis and verification from a medical provider indicating the student had rubeola measles;

   OR

3. Medical verification showing immunity to rubeola measles (rubeola titer)

Students who live in the residence halls are also required to provide proof of meningitis vaccination.

International students who have had a positive TB skin test, have had close contact with anyone who was sick with TB, or are members of a high-risk population may require further evaluation by the Student Health Center. Please see the online International Student Medical Form (www.stmartin.edu/healthcenter/Forms/internationalTBForm.pdf) for more information.

It is the mission of the Saint Martin's University Department of Integrated Technology Services (ITS) to actively support the educational goals of the University by providing services, resources, facilities, and technology in order to provide access to information and knowledge.

ITS provides and supports a range of technology services to the University. Below is a summary of these services:

• A network/email account is issued to each Saint Martin's student. Please note email is an official means of communication between the University and students; students are expected to monitor their @stmartin.edu mailbox.

• The ITS Help Desk offers free technical services to students for troubleshooting hardware and software problems, software installations, hardware replacement, network account support, and much more. Contact the Help Desk by emailing help@stmartin.edu or calling 360-688-2222 during business hours.

• Students are offered a free copy of Microsoft Office through the University. Education discounts and student versions for a handful of additional programs are also available. ITS can burn any necessary disks if the user supplies the USB drive, CD, or DVD and can also assist with installations if requested.

• Antivirus software, required for all computers used on campus, can be provided free of charge.

• Digital cameras, video cameras, laptop computers, and many more electronic devices are available for short-term loan at either O'Grady Library or the Computer Resource Center in Old Main.

• Console games and entertainment systems are supported, but at a lower priority than academic systems. Some games violate security processes that are essential; the University reserves sole discretion to block any Internet gaming.

Students are required to register their devices with the ITS system before they can be connected to the network.

A student's network account is required for access to all Saint Martin's computer labs and classrooms. As soon as they are enrolled at the University, students may apply for their account, either in person at the Help Desk in O'Grady Library or online at (www.stmartin.edu/its/TechnologyHelp/Accounts/AccountsCreation.aspx)

Students must agree to the terms of the University's Acceptable Use Policy (www.stmartin.edu/its/Policies/WebAcceptableUsePolicy.aspx). Violation of the policy can result in the disabling of the student account, which means no access to online portions of classes, online registration or student-specific tuition information, no university email address, no on-campus computer or printer access, and other similar limitations for the rest of their time at Saint Martin's University.

Tips for Families

What happens now?
Remember what it felt like when your child first began to walk, went to school, began to drive, and started to date? The freshman year of college is another in that series of firsts. Over the next year, your student will embark on a remarkable journey — college life. During this stage, he or she will make the next step toward becoming an adult.

It is a time full of exciting adventures, challenges, newfound dreams, uncertainties, unfamiliar faces, new surroundings and personal growth. As you watch this process take place, you may feel a sense of satisfaction, personal fulfillment and relief.

Many parents and family members also feel sad or as if they’re being left behind. Most will experience a combination of emotions. As the loved one of a new college student, you’ll follow a parallel road of change that includes a mixture of feelings and experiences, especially if this is your first or last child to leave home.

You may have encountered positive changes in your life: more room at home, lower grocery bills or increased access to the family car. Other, more subtle, changes can be anticipated. With extra time together, you and your partner may have the opportunity to talk more, get to know each other better and reclaim some of the lifestyle you shared before children became part of your life. Similarly, extra time and energy may be available for your other children and their interests and activities.

This year will be a time of reflection on the years that have brought you and your college student to this major turning point. As you transition from protector to guide, advisor and sounding board, you’ll be redefining your role as a parent or family member. The relationship with your student may take on new dimensions. Time together may become more precious. You may struggle to find balance in the degree of involvement with his or her life.

Whatever the changes, as an individual and as a family, you will be affected by your student’s college years. Regardless of background and culture, the common goal of most parents and families is to see their child succeed, be content and develop into responsible adults. The following pages include some information we hope will be helpful as you support your student during this crossroad in his or her life.
CHANGES
Starting college and being exposed to many new challenges and experiences can affect your student's social, vocational and personal choices. Students will begin to formalize their identity through a process of questioning and exploration. Realizing that change is a normal part of the developmental process can be helpful.

MOVEMENT TOWARD SELF-RELIANCE
A basic task for first-year college students is separating from parents and homes, regardless of whether they live on campus or with you. Your new college student will be faced with additional freedom and responsibilities, greater demands and more choices. Your student also will have less structure or guidance than in the past. He or she will be learning and practicing how to make decisions and choices without the structure and guidance you once provided. While balancing freedom and responsibility may be a challenge, it is a valuable lesson that will carry through life. This new freedom and responsibility can place demands on the family. Other family members may have personal needs that conflict with your college student’s need to separate and take responsibility for him or herself. For example, a parent's desire to be reassured that academics are going well may conflict with the student’s drive to run his or her own life. Trust and communication are paramount at this time.

IDENTITY FORMATION
Child psychologists say that this is a time of great change in a young adult’s life. Individuals of this age will increasingly define who they are, what they believe in, and what they want to do with their lives. To do so, they may begin to associate with and belong to particular groups, question previous beliefs, and explore different courses and interests. They may appear confused before they reach self-definition.

EXPLORING INTIMACY
New relationships emerge at this time in students’ lives. Some will end old relationships, some will have their first love, and others will explore new relationships or new kinds of relationships. At times, those relationships may be the most important thing in their lives. It can be difficult for family members, particularly those who have been close with one another, when students shift away from the family and turn toward friendships and romances to satisfy their desire for closeness and intimacy. Students usually learn more about themselves through these experiences.
NEW EXPERIENCES, CONCEPTS AND PHILOSOPHIES
In the search for greater self-knowledge and clarity about their identity, students may try out new ideas, theories and experiences to see if they fit with what they already know about themselves. Don’t be surprised if your student comes home with ideas different from those taught at home, questions on issues once taken for granted, or a new piercing or haircut. Take it in stride. The important thing is to keep communication lines open.

APPROVAL
Although your student may be exploring a new independence and identity, parental and familial acceptance and approval remain important. When you don’t agree with or approve of particular choices or opinions, this may be a challenge. Give your student support whenever possible.

CONFUSION AND INDECISION
While your student may start with an idea of what he or she believes, wants to do and likes to do, it is possible that he or she will begin to question such certainties. Your student may dive into new experience after new experience — or regress and cling to old, familiar ways. Remember, these are normal parts of the process of self-definition.

APPREHENSION
New situations, faces, expectations and uncertainties about the new environment at college can lead a student to begin slowly and go through an adjustment period. This is common, especially during the first semester. Reminding your child of new situations faced in the past and identifying how he or she successfully handled the challenge can ease the transition.

ACADEMIC ADJUSTMENT
Your child’s academic experience in college will probably vary greatly from that of high school. College forces students to solve problems and to express and defend a point of view. Memorizing information, while an important part of learning, is usually not sufficient to earn good grades. College will push your student, and thus cause frustration at times. If you’re like most parents, you’ll be curious about how things are going academically. When asking for progress reports, you might try asking your student to refrain from words such as “fine,” “OK” and “class average” and instead to use numbers, for example, 78 out of 90 points, 35 with a class average of 30, and so forth. If your student’s grades are lower than he or she expected, be supportive. Your student probably is more disappointed than you.
If you notice that low grades are an ongoing problem, encourage him or her to seek help from professors or advisors. If you notice that low grades are an ongoing problem, encourage him or her to seek help from professors or advisors.

MISTAKES

All students will make mistakes during their college experience. Mistakes can be an important learning experience for future situations. Mistakes, failures and disappointments are a necessary and normal part of maturing. At minimum, we expect students to get parking tickets, get sick or change majors. While students should be held accountable for their mistakes, they also should be encouraged to keep errors in perspective. For example, if your student fails a class, he or she hasn’t ruined his or her life. It may be necessary to take the course again to graduate, and your student may get to practice taking personal responsibility by not blaming the professor for the grade. Remind your child that everyone makes mistakes and that errors help us develop skills to handle new, adult situations and responsibilities and to move on.

STRESS

College is stressful, and the demands on students sometimes exceed their resources. As your child begins college, he or she will face the stresses of becoming part of a new community, taking on a “job” for which he or she has not been fully trained, and adapting to a new social life. Reactions to the stress can range from losing sight of priorities and becoming overly involved in social life to exaggerating responsibilities and withdrawing from social life. Given time, most students achieve a happy medium between these extremes. If your student shows signs of becoming too involved or too withdrawn, please talk to him or her immediately. Despite the common view that “these are the best years of your life,” the stresses of college are very real.

MONEY

On their own for the first time, some students have problems managing money. Among the situations they’ll encounter is being bombarded with offers for credit cards. Many students accumulate debt they cannot pay. Sit down with your student to discuss money. Talk through the larger issues of paying for tuition and room/board, as well as smaller ones such as spending money, and develop a plan. Meet again after the first semester to evaluate and revise the plan. Don’t let the important topic of money “work itself out.” Take charge of initiating these discussions.

VACATIONS

While the initial leave-taking is hard, adapting to your student’s return home for holidays and summer can be just as difficult, as both sides are faced with the changes made while they were apart. Make room for your new adult.
You may wish to negotiate some new house rules and curfews that recognize your child as an adult. Try to leave his or her room at home intact for at least the first semester. If a younger sibling wants to “move up,” wait until the next semester and let your college student help with the transition. Mentally preparing now may make vacations easier for the whole family.

Homesickness

Many students experience homesickness during their initial adjustment to a new environment — and periodically throughout their college years when pressures mount. Students are more prone to homesickness if: they have no experience with living and working away from home; they are reluctant to initiate social events; they have hobbies that don’t involve other people, such as computer games, reading, etc.; they have no friends outside of their hometown; or their family is experiencing distress from separation, divorce or illness of a family member. Homesickness is uncomfortable for both students and parents/families, and you will worry in proportions equal to your student’s unhappiness. However, homesickness usually passes. Each bout with homesickness builds the “antibodies” of coping skills, making future episodes less intense.
Parents frequently ask, “What can I do to support my daughter or son?” or “What things should we be prepared for?” It is important to remind yourselves of what you already know about parenting.

The elements that have enhanced your relationship with your son or daughter—mutual trust, caring, respect, commitment and effective communication—will still work at this time of transition. As the nature of your role as a parent begins to change, remember that your son or daughter will still need you—just in different ways. Below are some helpful tips from parents who have experienced the college transition:

College students are moving into adulthood. Help your student by giving him or her the room to take the responsibility that is necessary. Assist him or her in the decision-making process, offer a broad range of choices and possibilities, share your decision-making techniques and reflect back what you are hearing. Try not to make decisions for your student or give specific instruction on what to do. Trusting your student to make his or her own decisions underscores your belief in him or her. When concerned with a recent choice, remind yourself of the foundation you’ve built up to this point. Young adults carry that foundation with them. Most of the time, their decisions will contribute to their personal growth. You may need to accept changes in their values and goals, and to respect them for who they are becoming. You also may need the courage to watch them make mistakes and be understanding without saying “I told you so.” Parents can be supportive, trusting and encouraging of their child’s independence, and at the same time still be able to provide a safety net.

In dealing with transitions, it usually helps when parents learn to accept that they won’t know every detail of their student’s life. Understand that your student may have difficulties returning home on holidays after experiencing life on his or her own. For the last several months, your student has been accustomed to having to be concerned about only his or her own daily routine, not the family’s, and has lived without the house rules that may have been in existence prior to college life. He or she may come home with new expectations for family members. It’s a transition time for everyone.
WAYS TO STAY IN TOUCH

When your student was living at home, you likely talked every day about what was happening, where your student was going, and what he or she was doing. Now that your son or daughter is in college, your communication will change.

CELL PHONES
Cell phones make it easy for parents to stay in contact with students. It may be best to let your student call you when he or she has time to talk, or arrange times to connect. Of course, text messaging allows for quick, short messages and updates.

EMAIL AND SOCIAL MEDIA
Email provides a great way to communicate with college students because they can read and respond at their convenience. In your messages, talk about what’s happening at home and ask open-ended questions that require more than one-word answers. News from home and family, however mundane it may seem, is always welcome. Don’t be discouraged if you don’t get a reply to every message. It doesn’t mean your child doesn’t care — just that he or she is busy. Despite a seemingly challenging time of breaking away, at least from your end, your student is assured that whatever happens, your connection will always be there.

Social media, especially Facebook and Twitter, provide another popular means of communicating with your student. To follow what is happening at Saint Martin’s University through social media, like us on Facebook at www.facebook.com/saintmartinsuniversity or follow us on Twitter at @SMUNews.

HOME VISITS
Some students go home often, others return only for major holidays and events. While you want your student to always feel welcome at home, encourage him or her to stay on campus as much as possible during the first few months of college. Developing friendships and getting involved in campus activities in their new community contribute to a student’s college success.

VISITING CAMPUS
Another option for staying connected is a campus visit to meet your child’s new friends and see his or her surroundings. Be sure to arrange these visits ahead of time.
SNAIL MAIL

Even in today’s world of email, texting and Facebook, there is still something special about receiving “snail mail.” There’s nothing better than opening mail — a card, a postcard or a package — from home. A “survival kit” or “care package” with treats and goodies around midterms or finals is especially welcome.

CAMPUS RESOURCES

Be knowledgeable about campus resources. Check out the academic calendar included in this handbook so you’re aware of significant times of the year. If your student is living on campus, read the residence contract and other materials enclosed with the room assignment. You’ll find a wealth of information about campus and residence resources, services and staff.

Familiarizing yourself with campus resources is just one step toward supporting your student. It may be helpful to keep this list of campus resources handy so you can refer your student to on-campus individuals or departments that can provide assistance when needed.

WAYS TO COMMUNICATE WITH YOUR STUDENT

LISTEN

Take time to listen attentively to your student’s excitement, as well as to difficulties, without offering solutions. Often, a young adult isn’t looking for parents to solve the problem, but to understand how he or she feels about it.

BE INTERESTED

This is a new world for your child. Show concern about your student’s life by understanding his or her struggles. Ask questions, but try not to invade his or her privacy. Don’t make conversations feel like quizzes. Questions can be about new experiences and new friends being made. Ask your student what they are learning in class instead of always focusing on grades. If your student mentions a new person’s name, casually ask about that person rather than drill for details. If the new experiences aren’t shared with you immediately, don’t give up. Often, students talk to parents more in the later years of college. Your student will let you know what is happening, but at his or her own pace and timing. Be open to those opportunities when they arise. Most of all, balance your communication by not always making it about them. Share what’s happening in your life, too!

DON’T OVERREACT

If you want your student to share his or her college experience with you, don’t overreact to what you’re told. If you blow up, worry excessively, or are exceedingly disapproving or mistrustful, your student will be much less likely to share these new experiences in the future.
BE ENCOURAGING
“Encouragement” means to give courage. Offer your student a helping hand toward a successful college experience by reminding him or her of strengths, and of successful ways past mistakes were handled. Your son or daughter may need encouragement in the transition from high school to college. Not all first-year students understand how rigorous the academic expectations are. Your student may not be fully aware of the accountability, responsibility and independent hard work involved in earning a college degree. It is typical for grades to go down in the first year; if you sense your student may be feeling down about grades (or any other issues), encourage them to get help from the campus resources. Students who seek a little assistance typically get back on track and do fine.

SHARE YOUR HUMANITY
Research has shown that when we share our humanity, we build stronger connections, stronger rapport and greater empathy. Empathy and validation are essential aspects of growth and learning as your students face the realities of life. In college, students are beginning to experience some disillusionment. They begin to recognize that the world is no longer perfect and authority figures do have flaws, eventually facing some hard truths about life — including the fact that we all make mistakes.

Share some of your own weaknesses and challenges, as well as your wisdom in how you have been able to learn from mistakes. In doing so, you teach your son or daughter about the value of having the humility to admit mistakes, having the courage to pick oneself up and move on, and having the commitment to make change. These values contribute to your student’s awareness of reality, which in turn prepare them for life, both during the college years and after graduation.
BE PATIENT
Changes, mistakes, confusion, new identities — all of these are challenging and stressful for both you and your student. Allow time for him or her to sort things out. Be patient and understanding — with yourself, too. Trust your son or daughter. Finding oneself is a difficult enough process without feeling that the people whose opinions you respect most are second-guessing your own second-guessing.

BE FLEXIBLE
Your child needs the opportunity to pull away and come back, to try on new ideas and to experiment with identity. What is a certainty in your student’s mind one semester may change the next. Your flexibility will not only help your child, but also will help you keep up with the changes without becoming frustrated.

BE SUPPORTIVE
The transition in your relationship with your child may be as confusing for him or her as it is for you. Let your student know that you understand the stress associated with this challenging time and that you’re supportive of his or her ability to make sound decisions. Be prepared for “the phone call.” Often it comes just after midterm exams or near the end of the first semester, when a student’s work is piling up, grades aren’t what they’d hoped, they’re feeling overwhelmed and their coping skills begin to fail. When this happens, a student feels upset and, chances are, he or she will call parents or family members. It’s important that you don’t panic. Remember that this is normal, and as much as you’d like to alleviate their stress, you cannot (and should not) “fix this” for them. They will rely on you to be calm and to reassure them of their ability to successfully work through the challenge(s). Encourage them to seek help from campus resources.

MAINTAIN A SENSE OF HUMOR
Laughter is a great antidote to many ills!

Saint Martin’s University is subject to the provisions of federal law known as the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (also referred to as the Buckley Amendment or FERPA). This act affords matriculated students certain rights with respect to their educational records. These rights include:

1. The right to inspect and review their education records within 45 days of the day the University receives a request for access. The University registrar will make arrangements for access and notify the student of the time and place where the records may be inspected. If the University registrar does not maintain the records, the student will be directed to the University official to whom the request should be addressed.

2. The right to request the amendment of their education records that a student believes is inaccurate or misleading. Students who wish to request an amendment to their educational record should write the University official responsible for the record, clearly identify the part of the record they want changed, and specify why it is inaccurate or misleading. If the University decides not to amend the record as requested by the student, the student will be notified of the decision and advised of his or her right to a hearing.

3. The right to consent to disclosures of personally identifiable information contained in the student’s education records to third parties, except in situations that FERPA allows disclosure without the student’s consent. One such situation is disclosure to school officials with legitimate educational interests. A “school official” is a person employed by the University in an administrative, supervisory, academic, research or support staff position (including University law enforcement personnel and health staff); a person or company with whom the University has contracted; a member of the board of trustees; or a student serving on an official University committee, such as the honor council, student conduct council, or a grievance committee, or assisting another school official in performing his or her tasks. A school official has a legitimate educational interest if the official needs to review an education record in order to fulfill his or her professional responsibility.
The Buckley Amendment provides the University the ability to designate certain student information as “directory information.” Directory information may be made available to any person without the student’s consent unless the student gives notice as provided for below. Saint Martin’s has designated the following as directory information: the student’s name, addresses, telephone number, e-mail address, student ID photos, date and place of birth, major field of study, school, classification, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weights and heights of members of athletic teams, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, the most recent previous educational agency or institution attended by the student, and other similar information. Any new entering or currently enrolled student who does not wish disclosure of directory information should notify the University registrar in writing. No element of directory information as defined above is released for students who request nondisclosure except in situations allowed by law. The request to withhold directory information will remain in effect as long as the student continues to be enrolled, or until the student files a written request with the University registrar to discontinue the withholding. To continue nondisclosure of directory information after a student ceases to be enrolled, a written request for continuance must be filed with the University registrar during the student’s last term of attendance.

If a student believes the University has failed to comply with the Buckley Amendment, he or she may file a complaint using the student complaint and grievance procedure as outlined in the student handbook. If dissatisfied with the outcome of this procedure, a student may file a written complaint with the Family Policy Compliance Office, U.S. Department of Education, 600 Independence Avenue SW, Washington, D.C. 20202-4605.
